“ It seems likewhenever I ran into George at Meijers when strike up a friendly conversation and unite often the conversation was interrupted by young men saying “Mr Dikeman?? It was very obvious that his former students admired himself liked to talk to Boyd about hunting and fishing and he REALLY liked the venison sausage! He was a good man and will be missed

“ Uncle George was such a wonderful man! He was so easy to talk to and most always found humor in whatever subject was being discussed. He was interested and interesting which made him a great conversationalist. He was always so sweet to me and I enjoyed visiting with him & Aunt Agnes whenever I was back in Michigan. He will be remembered well and missed always.

“Floyd and I always looked forward to seeing Agnes and George when they visited northwestern Michigan. As soon as their car came to a stop in the driveway, Agnes and I would immediately launch into a topic of conversation that left the guys to their own devices - which they had no trouble doing. George and Floyd conversed easily about livestock, target practice and countless other issues that they felt would benefit from their unique insight. I will miss his easy manner and his wit.
