In the short couple of years that I knew Grandpa Burman I got to see how much he truly loved his family and how much he was loved by everyone else. He loved to play checkers or chess with his children and grandchildren and was competitive. Everytime we went to visit grandpa at the home I would always look at the white board to see if he was still winning on the Chess game tally that he kept above his nightstand. He was part of the "Greatest Generation" who persevered through the Great Depression and WWII and was a Great Man too. You will be sadly missed by all that you touched. ~
