“ Sometimes there just aren't any answers - but what we do know is that God sees each tear, feels every hurt, understands our need to ask "why", and because of His love for us, we trust that in time His comfort and peace will come.

Praying for your strength and that comfort and peace will come soon.

With Deepest Sympathy,
Love, Great Grandparents, Norm and Kathy Cole

“ Brie - I remember the first time you told me you thought you might be pregnant. I loved seeing all the pictures you took of t-shirts indicating he, your 6th, was soon to arrive. The beautiful pictures you had taken of you pregnant with your precious boy. The time you spent on the road to have infusions and time in the hospital. The time only a mother who loved her baby would give.

Thinking of us laughing over cake snuck in under the noses of the nurses and how the city of Cincinnati needed help figuring out how to make Mexican food like Michigan. Being beat in a game of Battleship after your first voyage down the hall.

I remember quietly watching you as you lovingly passed your hand over your growing belly time and time again. Telling me of your fears that only a previous mother could voice aloud. You endured for Tyler.

I remember the texts especially the one that said you were headed in to have a c-section and the one that said you heard him cry for the first time. The nights I spent praying for you, Josh and Tyler. The waiting to hear word on his condition. The cry I cried for you both at 4 am receiving a text letting me know that Tyler had gone to be with the Lord.

My prayers for you both continue as you navigate this loss of a such a beautiful boy. We know he is in Jesus' arms now and awaits the day you will see him again. It doesn't take the pain of losing him away but because of the hope I know you both have in Jesus it makes the unthinkable bearable as you too rest in the Saviors arms and gain your strength and peace through Him who loves us. With much love to you, Josh and the kids - Amy ❤️
