“ My fondest memory of my mother was a monster. I was in 6th grade, and someone dressed in tattered, oversized clothes and huge dirty boots, wearing the most gnarly monster mask came into my classroom, and decided to single me out. I was clueless. Overly curious, I ditched out of class to follow him...only it was a her...my mother. She went on to delight the younger kids, with me trying to be stealthy. It didn't work. I got in a bit of trouble for ditching class until the culprit unmasked. I have never forgotten that. Great memory.
